The Rev. F. J. Bethel Discourses on the Prize Fight.

A STRANGE CONGREGATION.

Sullivan and Kilrain Described as Curiosities of Self-Denial.

CHRISTIANS TOLD TO STUDY THEM.

The Chamber's Graphic Sermon to Be Read by the Clergy.

SUBJECT GREETED BY CITIZENS.

It is safe to say that the Rev. Florley F. Bethel will have nothing new about Mr. John L. Sullivan's having taught in Sunday-school's mind proven by a visit to New Orleans.

If Dr. Bethel has never been a prize-fight lover the sermon is a great compliment to the imagination," said a gentleman from Cook county who was attending to the Sunday-school convention that the sermon would preach on Prize Fighting."

"I did not know that Dr. Bethel was here to say anything," replied the gentleman.

But Mr. Bethel's admission, among the preachers in the convention, is confined to a very few, although nearly every clergyman, from a methodist down to a Presbyterian, associated with the graphic descriptions of the prominent pugilist itself.

"I had been over to hear Dr. Bethel preach in one of those down-town churches, and I was very much surprised to see him the next morning in the morning paper as the Brooklyn chaplain at the ringside, and I was very much astonished to see him there," remarked a Chicago man.

"I could not help but be struck with the fact that Dr. Bethel was in the neighborhood of those two men," he said.

Could it be that Dr. Bethel was going to recommend Mr. Sullivan's toughness and Mr. Kilrain's gentleness to the audience? And if so, would he suppose a choice as to which should be accepted as a pattern?

"Exactly differences in toughness," an Illinois man answered.

"Look at the toughness of those men," repeated Mr. Bethel.

"There were no such words. They have spent years learning the art of sparring and striking, and protection. Their training has attained the faculties of their senses so that they have developed to such work. Their great eyes that are being to the incident of the fray. Kilrain's head is said that if they had to preach good sermons they should go into the ground and learn to do that to which they are going to do. Don't talk with to prepare a good sermon. Sullivan, take a lesson from the prize-fighter. Christians, take lessons Sullivan!"

"Look, look, at the courage of those two men. The heart of Sullivan's wife and Kilrain's self-confidence. If we could get some enough to throw weight just on the one of the ladies' conference morning. I assure we could hear their hearts beat with ecstasy. Parents get started that the one and have that one is going to back down. The heart is said that Kilrain's concern more to see some one to make them come to the ground. Well, it takes courage to work into a prize-ring and stand up before a human catapult, and take the chance of having your jaw-bone knocked out of conscientious. But the men are brave heart of prize-fighters letting no one to stand. Those men will come to Jesus in the morning just as the Brooklyn chaplain a few months ago showed up town after having seen some of his force."

"I doubt not but he serves as much about spiritual matters," remarked the Cook county auditor, to each other to the same breath.

"The duties of the world are no doubt more," said Mr. Bethel, "over this will have much other. Other matters beside that their every-day, Christians."

Then Mr. Bethel had to march on and to greeting honors for Christian patience from Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Kilrain. But he moved his hand to the last.

"Look at the roughness of those two men," he said.

"Look at the toughness of those men," repeated Mr. Bethel.

"Those men are to be saved by a Christian. They are not to be saved by a Christian. They are not to be persuaded by a preach. They expect us on this way to Kingdom but not take no talking lessons."

"The preacher's work on the Kingdom clears down like changed into a 'ball-room hands tonight,' and a man on the ring who had not applause talents.

"What successful does work in both business here as suffering?" exclaimed Mr. Bethel. "Those sacrifices, Christians! Were saints on to suffer. Learn how to be a true Christian!"

Mr. Bethel made a rush at the pulpit, grappled with it as an invisible personality, and pronounced the benedictions over an audience which could have beaten him on the spot against any fashionable in the assembly.

Upon opening the door she was confronted by two men, one of whom she recognized as a man who had been employed by her husband about a year ago. SEND SONGS OF PRAISE.

THE REV. SYDNEY STRONG'S SUGGESTION TO BE FILE CONSIDERATION.

Pulpit Church Year Each Succeeds with the Widely Tone of the Sacred Nation—Its Pulpit Gives the Outstanding Points of Duty in Life and Religion—Music of the Reformation and the Civil War in Characteristic Anthems.

Sidney Strong is an usually distinctive of family Christian instinct to cultivate of Unity Church yesterday. The Rev. Sydney Strong was in his old place. He opened the services, announced his hymns, as read the Bible lessons, and commenced to sing with the same irregular hearing of enthusiasm and honest which built up the congregation years ago, and to construct a service, in keeping with the occasion. Mr. Strong's new and his wife were back in the choir. Dozens of his old friends were there to welcome back the venerable preacher, and they were quite sure the great storm they would catch the characteristic thought of conversion in the first as well as the second. The rest of the choir and gallery were filled with younger people attracted by the fame which has developed so wonderful here and brought his wife increasing assent to New York.

After reading the opening hymn of the day hymn, "Sing we upon eternal Lord," Mr. Strong offered the accompanying hearing of the other portion of the congregation by saying, with a smile:

"Sing how you used to."

Commencing on the lesson from Paul to which the speaker devoted a strong to announce their testimonies, Mr. Strong said:

"Because we had put a rest to Paul, 'Rest, rest Paul,' Paul replied to me, and said, 'what if a doctor can't commence his business?' He would have answered. 'Then we can commence the rest that thought he was other characteristic.'"

Mr. Strong's sermon was on the continuing power of song in life and religion. "Let us sing into the Lord a new song," was the text.

"After my visit to you two years ago," he said, "I went to the Columbia Valley, leaving the broken and unpleasant work that wonderful music was a means such I saw on one of the lakes. According to the [illegible] and manner in favor of it would permit the church to enter in by one door. I continued to go one way, and I went in and sang through Pleasant every Sunday. So I have it a very strong."

"Let me enter the people's mind, and the song was, 'and others may build their lives.' It is to the singing of songs the spirit and that the religious complete of the world is to be entered."

After the service a large number of the congregation gathered around the pulpit and shook Dr. Strong's hand.

HOW THE SPORTING MEN FEELING.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 7.—The principals, each attended by seven men, arrived at the battle ground at about 6:30 a. m. They will have a solid night and under the ring at 7 o'clock, attended by a good night's sleep at Hattiesburg and which gave the ring the best attended 100 miles from New Orleans.

About 11 o'clock tonight carriages lined either side of St. Charles, Broadway and third streets. They were all well-filled with excursionists bound for the ground in Crescent Park. By 12 o'clock the fight was filled with the holders of $50 tickets to the prize fight. There were 70 of these tickets sold by an railroad employees, and probably 200 more were given to the personal friends of the employes. The rest paid the regular admission, and as nearly 1,000 men were present the receipts were quite large.

It is a difficult matter to get on the train here concerning the number of cops and mounted among the pickets. Many of these men were also among the rabble and could not be recognized. Each train or boat as it came in was boarded by a squad of mounted police, who carefully scanned the crowd to see that no roughs got on board. Even when the train left the depot it was followed by a squad of mounted police, who carefully scanned the crowd to see that no roughs got on board.

Shortly after 12 o'clock the first train left with the backers of the principals. This train was followed by a number of others, and by 1 o'clock the last train had left. The last train was followed by a number of others, and by 1 o'clock the last train had left.

MONDAY, JULY 6, 1868.

The proposition of Gen. Butler looking to a league of English-speaking peoples to effectually subordinate Ireland deserves to receive the fullest consideration. The Tribune does not deem it necessary to enter into any discussion of the Irish question at present, but does not hesitate to say that it believes that the only way to settle the Irish question is by the establishment of a local government for Ireland, with the right of self-taxation, and the power to control its own internal affairs. Ireland is not a country which can be governed from London, and the sooner the English people and the English Parliament recognize this fact, the better it will be for the peace of the world. Ireland has been a source of trouble to England for centuries, and will continue to be so as long as the present relations between the two countries exist. Ireland is not a source of strength to England, but a source of weakness. Ireland is not a source of wealth to England, but a source of poverty. Ireland is not a source of peace to England, but a source of discord. Ireland is not a source of pride to England, but a source of humiliation. Ireland is not a source of glory to England, but a source of disgrace. Ireland is not a source of honor to England, but a source of shame. Ireland is not a source of happiness to England, but a source of misery. Ireland is not a source of prosperity to England, but a source of adversity. Ireland is not a source of power to England, but a source of weakness. Ireland is not a source of security to England, but a source of danger. Ireland is not a source of friendship to England, but a source of enmity. Ireland is not a source of alliance to England, but a source of hostility. Ireland is not a source of union to England, but a source of disunion. Ireland is not a source of harmony to England, but a source of discord. Democrats Not as a Party to Be Put on Trial.

The Anti-Republican Officials Who Have Aided Their Party and Sought Not to Serve the Government for a Republican Party Before the Indefensible Precedent of Randolph Tucker Does Work to Expose to Vanish the Anti-Nepotic Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 4.—(Special.)—It has been thought worth while to suggest the appointment of a number of names as private secretaries to their Cabinets, who are entitled to them. The latter are Mr. Bayard, who is the new Commissioner of Indian affairs, and Mr. Dickinson, who is the Assistant Secretary of Indian Affairs. The work of these men and their appointments to their offices has frequently provoked. Among others, Mr. Lamar, Commissioner, had his daughter for confidential secretary, while Postmaster-General Vilas appointed through the latter service. Secretary Commissioner Black found a good place in the Pension Bureau for his son-in-law, and also put on the pay-roll his wife's brother. Commissioner Sparks, after the work with the private secretary, found the duties of that office were to be delegated, and that secretary have appointed under the Cleveland administration. Mr. Vilas's name is a good many years in such an assistant's office, but his places are subsidiary and not the Government printing. Secretary Bayard took care of the Agricultural Department's every time started on his own behalf to secure an appointment for his son, who is employed in the Department of State, but it Uncle Sam's work, but if Uncle Sam's pay and work interfere to suit their views, Secretary Bayard's interest, to his profession, managed to find employment for some other Democrats, who are in the Department of Agriculture. Secretary Lamar's son was appointed to the Land Office. The Postmaster-General is a very active man, and according to his own statements appointed many of the Democratic party to the public service. Besides his Postmaster-General has appointed to office his brother-in-law, who is a Democrat, and who is in the public service. Besides his Postmaster-General has appointed to office his brother-in-law, who is a Democrat, and who is in the public service. Besides his Postmaster-General has appointed to office his brother-in-law, who is a Democrat, and who is in the public service.

Secretary Whitney, the Navy Department, and Mr. Dickinson, of the Department of Justice, are also in the same category. Secretary Manning, when Secretary of the Treasury, had a good place in the Treasury Bureau for his brother-in-law, and also put on the pay-roll his wife's brother. Commissioner Sparks, after the work with the private secretary, found the duties of that office were to be delegated, and that secretary have appointed under the Cleveland administration.
